THURSDAY MORNING, NOV 27, 1862

No flag but the Old Flag—the Red White and Blue
With the stars for the union that never can rive
Arise and defend it ye sons of the brave
Whose blood bought the boon merely now for must save

Thanksgiving Day

To day the people o Oregon are called upon to lay aside their ordinary vocations and unite as one man in giving thanks and praise to Almighty God, the Great Giver of all good for the many blessings and favors we have received from His munificent hand That the people of Oregon have much cause to rejoice and great reasons to feel thankful for the many blessings we have enjoyed as a people and State within the past year and for the bright prospects of a prosperous future none will deny All must admit that while war's terrible scourge is sweeping as with a besom of destruction the fair land of our once happy and prosperous sister States of this Union, devastating and laying waste all the bright prospects and fond hopes of their citizens , that while their country is filled with the piteous moans, sighs and sorrows of grief and despair and the tears of widows and orphans are falling like rain upon the hearthstones of their once happy but now ruined and desolate homes , that while thousands of our kindred and friends are freely shedding the most precious life's blood upon the battle fields of the country to preserve and perpetuate the blessings of civil liberty and the honor and dignity of this great Nation, Oregon, while all these tumultuous scenes and desolating horrors are being enacted in our Eastern States, has been permitted thus far to remain in the enjoyment of peace and quietness, prosperity and happiness, Then who will deny that we have not abundant reason to feel thankful to God for these blessings and favors, and who among us that would refuse to ask a continuance thereof? As has been truly remarked, "Ingratitude is an "

But it is not alone our duty to return thanks, as this would be but selfishness. We should all join with one voice and one mind in the most devout petitions to the Great God of Battles that He will, by His Almighty power, so rule and direct, assist and protect the struggling hosts who are engaged in the great conflict for the preservation of the Union and the enforcement of the laws, that a speedy victory may be obtained over our enemies, and peace and prosperity again restored to our distracted country Acknowledging the source whence comes all our blessings, past, present and future, we should implore that source, in accents of devout Christian faith, for help in this our time of need Truly has our Governor said in his Proclamation

"The blessings of our Great Father are still unnumbered and his mercies ever tender Notwithstanding our great national chastisements, trials and afflictions, the best and wisest Government the world ever saw,—a Government rocked, but not overthrown, shall stand to bless unnumbered millions of the future." "Amid many evils, the laws of nature—another name for the will of God—are steadfast, honest and true The day follows the night , rains and sunshine invigorate the earth, and seed time and abundant harvests are vouchsafed to all. Golden treasures from the mountains are filling the hands of persevering miners in a manner unprecedented in the history of the world. No national taxes have ever been required at our hands before, and no people has ever been more able, and I trust more willing to pay them A large accession has been made to our population, and among the number are many who have seen and felt the sad realities of this wicked rebellion, and have come to receive what they may here enjoy—peace and prosperity among a Union loving people, in a State free from debt "

"Enter into His gates with thanksgiving and into His courts with praise , be thankful unto Him and bless His name "

From our Powder River Correspondent

AUBURN, Nov 15th 1862

Auburn is now in its improved prosperous and healthy condition and fresh gold is found almost in the streets Under ordinary circumstances we could not be expected to give a description of woman kind in its great abundance and unsurpassed beauty, and vast concourse we walk the high its streets amidst in length with unwieldy some of the largest hearing the well fed infant and dressing babies in style While in other localities I have mentioned in parts of Oregon women are seen in rags and filthy habiliments and now help to swell the population and give tone to its morals

Of the other two rival trading places in our city I can say nothing going on but here is a full and free peace—the only restraint coming to my knowledge being the thrashing I am exposed by a refugee Virginian who could not hear Jeff Davis t asted

The idea prevails below that the late emigration was strictly imbued with disloyal sentiments and that there is great danger that Baker county will go south Unless my impressions are erroneous such is not the case I have never heard Southern views defended in Auburn and I do not hesitate to declare the people of Baker county as loyal as those in any part of the State

There is no decrease in the number of buildings still going on , the sound of the plane the saw the hammer and the axe is continually heard and the ring of the hewers is often followed by the loud crash, and then the thundering fall of the tall pines that are standing among the houses of the town . Auburn is built on Blue Canyon, as far up as it is possible to build and then spreads out down the creek, where the ground becomes better adapted to the purpose, and at last opens out to a very beautiful town site affording room for any number of buildings in the future The waters of the gulch are to unsolicited by mining to use, and there are two springs that afford water to the town The two are perhaps half a mile apart and it is a pleasant sight morning and even to see the crowds pouring to, and waiting around the springs going and coming with buckets full and empty There are old and young children and grown people men and women and the well is a fine place to make the acquaintance of your neighbors to gallantly help the girls and the ladies all to fill their buckets and exchange a word that leads to a better acquaintance Really it reminds me of the 11 patriarchal times, and carries one back to Jacobs Well and the well at Samaria, for our return door is close to the upper spring and we can appreciate the full force of the graphic picture and it is one I never appreciated before

The architecture of Auburn borders on the primitive, and the houses have an air of simplicity only equalled by their comfort and warmth Log cabins well chinked and daubed, defy cold weather, and the five hundred houses that are found within the corporate limits, are not to be despised Still the weather here is the clear, cold weather one would ask for in winter, only that while the people of the Willamette, all here desire rain and cannot thrive without it As it is, the loaded trains continue to come in and every day adds to the abundance of supplies Now roads are being prospected through the mountains in every direction, and the coming summer will see new routes opened for travel, and the distance actually much shortened besides roads made and located that can be much easier traveled

The Boise mines are at present below par, quite a number having returned who give discouraging reports One man who remained there the long period of three days gave quite a gloomy picture

The fact is, it is too late to go to Boise this winter, and those who expect to scrape up the ore with spoons, of course come back disappointed Another summer will be sufficient to show that there is mining country here enough and rich enough to pay a population of hundreds of thousands, and the numbers will in a few years correspond to the figures

It was a narrow minded policy that denied to Mr Kirkpatrick a seat in the Legislature, and the consequences are already felt in the fact becoming manifest that Baker county has suffered from having no one to care for her interests No provision was made to raise a revenue and the County Commissioners cannot find any law to enable them to assess and collect taxes until another summer, by which time there must be a debt created that will be hard to meet

The fact is, there was very little appreciation of our interests in the Legislature What they did take pains to do, was to, so far as possible, curtail the influence of this section in the future and prevent any interference from this quarter in such trifling affairs as the making of Senators, or the location of the seat of Government

The people here, do, so far as I can see regret the failure of Mr Kirkpatrick to find a voice to urge their claims in the Legislature, and the result shows they had no one else to look to their interests in that body

Items From Walla Walla.

A Fact to be Remembered.—We believe no medicine in the world has ever given such astonishing proof of its efficacy as Dr. WM HALL'S BALSAM In cases of severe Coughs, Bronchitis, and incipient Consumption, this medicine acts in the most prompt and pleasant manner, restoring health when all other remedies have failed.

White's Patent Lever Trusses.—These instruments are recommended to the public as the best ever yet invented. The principle is new and different from any other. The Pad works over a Knuckle, giving it a circular UPWARD and INWARD motion, thus being able to support a Rupture with half the pressure required by other Trusses. The pain consequent upon heavy pressure is entirely avoided.

These instruments will not rust, and are the lightest, most durable and most cleanly of all others They can be washed at pleasure. Many persons have been cured by these instruments of several years standing

White's Fever and Ague Drops—For the cure of AGUE, PANAMA FEVER, NEURALGIA and GENERAL DEBILITY.

This medicine has been used in private practice for many years with great success Indeed, in no instance has it failed to effect a speedy cure, in Ague especially one bottle having been found sufficient in most cases and in none are more than two bottles required.

A great number of testimonials could be given to verify these statements but the proprietor prefers relying upon the merits of the medicine alone A cure is guaranteed to nine cases out of ten

Prepared only by ROBERT WHITE Chemist and Druggist, Main street, Placerville, and Broadway Upper Placerville. For sale by all respectable druggists throughout the State.

FIELD'S STEAMED OYSTERS!

MR. A. FIELD, whose Oysters have long enjoyed the highest reputation in this market has recently invented a entirely new process of packing which possesses many advantages over the one hitherto employed, so preserves the natural flavor freshness and shape of the Oyster that they may be either Stewed, Fried, Scolloped or Fancy Roasted—in fact cooked in any manner adapted to those just taken from the shell They will not be broken into pieces by land travel however lengthy, and will retain their sweetness, after the can is cut, longer than secured by any other method.

The Renegade's Mother.

On the western shores of Lake Champlain, during the first years of the War of the Revolution there dwelt an aged but evil hearted woman known among the settlers of that region by the name of Hester Madge It was rumored that she had sought the solitude of the woody shores to evade the punishment due her for the perpetration of some heinous but unknown crime many years before in the city of New York To have attempted to trace this rumor to its fountain head would have been futile, and men were contented to believe it after one glance at the lowering black browed and scowling visage of the shriveled hag who seemed to have no affinity for any of her species, save for a tall, lean, savage faced man who called her 'mother,' or 'fiend' as the humor suited him, and who appeared at long intervals to make a short sojourn at the lonely log hut in which she passed the greater portion of her existence Sometimes the hunter, strolling by accident past only the door of her dwelling, might pause to stare in wonder at the witch like shape smoking a pipe in the doorway, and glaring with baleful eyes at the waveless lake, as if she envied the water in its calm, and would conjure a storm to tear it from the distant and rocky shores But he would soon hurry from the step when the hag leaped toward him ferociously, hurling stones and curses after him Otherwise, no visits were made to Hester Madge

The rumor of the rapid approach of Burgoyne, with an immense force of redcoats and redskins, from the Canadas, was driving all those whom British fury stigmatized as "rebels," from the sparsely settled region of Lake Champlain, and while the women and children were hurried to the interior, the men hastened to join the American army, that was springing into armed life from every town and hamlet, to check the boastful invader

Hester Madge did not fly from her mountain home, but perched upon a projecting rock that overlooked the borders of the lake, screamed her mad derision at each fugitive laden boat as it glided by Save the loud jeer of some reckless boatman, as he laughed at her rage, no greeting was given her but the silence of contempt.

"Run, run, ye dogs! and may the redskins give every one of ye bloody nightcaps!" was her continual song, until the last boat had vanished from her sight

One moonlight and silent night, after a day of cursing, because no boat had passed her door, she sat crouching over a gloomy fire, smouldering upon her rude hearth, muttering: "They are all gone, and I am queen of the lake—queen of the lake—queen of the lake! But the redskins will roast them They hated me and I hate them—curse them all! Curse and blight every one!"

Hours of this senseless jargon had flown by, and the weird stillness of midnight had settled upon shore and water, when as she heaped fresh faggots upon the embers, her long absent son threw open the unbarred door and entered, dragging after him a bound yet beautiful girl.

He was a man whose shaggy and uncombed locks were already grizzled, but more by crime than by time, and his cat-like eyes, greenish and phosphoric gleamed from a visage stamped with every feature of vice

The captive, whose white and tender arms were bound with cruel thongs of buck skin, so tightly that the small and delicate hands were purple and swollen, was a maiden of some seventeen years, tall and stately, despite her bonds, and with large black eyes flashed scorn and defiance upon her unmanly captor. Her air and dress was much superior to such as usually belonged to the girls of the frontier, and her whole bearing was that of a brave and refined woman above all misfortune

"D'ye know her mother?" were the first words of the ruffian, whose semi savage and semi civilized garb denoted one of those soulless mercenary renegades who sided with the British, not from loyalty to the king, but because the redcoats were in the ascendancy At the first turn of fortune Abner Madge would have changed sides to have slain his former companion

The hag plucked a brand from the fire and held its flame near the face of the proud captive, gazed intently for a moment and then slapped the defenseless cheek with her open palm

"Do I know her?" she screamed with a fiendish glee and tossing aloft the brand, "Do I know a snake from a fish? It is the daughter of Henry Upson the rich rebel to the king and the man who would hang Hester Madge were she in the grip of the law Ha! mink! you may curl your lip at me, but when I tell you that your father saw me do what my hate made me

"Bah!" exclaimed Abner, impatiently "out with it, old woman You darked my step-father because the old man had made up his mind never to die, and we wanted his gold Henry Upson saw it done, and saw me help So we fled from the city ten years ago and having heard that the only witness of the deed had settled not many miles from here a year ago we have laid in wait to gain the knowledge of the why that we might lay hands on any wealth that it was said I was the heir of But I must be more wily than I was to gather any hard of Hurons You see we are at a disadvantage of But I have kept my knife and my rifle bright and my savages and hunting gold Upson and his family will fall fight we pounced upon them

I have got Henry Upson's scalp that hangs from your belt and I will black you shrieked the hag

'I wish I was as sure of power as the revengeful girl is that Henry Upson is dead' said the captive 'but the old hag and her son law Harold Holmes the rebel captain, made them less exquisite well both found But before we could give them retribution they sailed and scattered ours But I had secured the girl and while Hagar watched on my horse I saw Upson and Holmes in full chase after my Hurons while I pursued an opposite course hither Now look to it girl and the bounty on the scalps shall be yours—the British spy will forfeit his lips I must be off my braves for the rebels cannot long keep up the pursuit, for with her I shall have our way back to home and fortune—old Upson has no kin but his daughter Clara, and loves her as his life Besides I hope to catch the father and lover before morning, by the aid of this bright moon

Abner hastened away and Hester ceased staring at the captive with malicious eyes

'I want to kill you you look so much like Henry Upson' said she, between her curses, but ye shall live I am too old and battered to care for wealth now but we may never grow too old to love revenge—Clara Upson ye shall live in shame and sorrow, as I have lived; and Abner Madge and I shall be the only ones at your bounty wedding The tidings will wither the heart strings of Henry Upson—if he escapes my boy's hatchet I love to look at you and think about it

The calm bright eyes of the queenly captive did not flinch from the malicious hate that seemed to gloat upon her youth and beauty The exulting hag sat with her back to the door and grasping a long keen bladed knife in her skinny yellow claws exclaiming

'I wish that was Henry Upson's heart, I do' I do' and darting the steel savagely into the wood at every word

An hour passed thus, when a tall and powerful man, behind whom appeared another, older and with white hair, filled the doorway So stopped were Hester's ears with the clamors of her blasphemies and ravings, that she heard no signs of their presence nor dreamed of it until Harold Holmes cast his sinewy arm around her and gagged her foul mouth with his hand—The father and lover were armed with pistols only

'Cut the cords—haste,' he cried, and with waste of breath for Henry Upson had done it ere the words were spoken The pair had marked the flight of the renegade and hurried in pursuit, while the friends kept on after the Hurons

There was but brief time for embracing, and after securely binding the venomous hag and gagging her with a rope that filled her mouth and was tied behind her head, Harold lifted the new fainting girl in his stout arms and with her father hurried to the lake shore There they found a canoe, in which they embarked and pushed from the pebbly beach

Hardly had this been done when Abner, with three painted savages—all that were left of his too eager band—rushed into the hut

At a glance he discovered all Calling to his warriors to follow him, and heedless of the great and blazing fagot that had rolled from the hearth to the floor, he rushed to the shore The moon shed a radiance clear and fair, and he saw the fugitives yet in rifle shot

"Aim at the men, he said as he levelled his rifle at Upson Four rifles cracked at once, and the renegade shouted with joy as he saw both father and son sink to the bottom of the canoe

'The girl for me—the scalps for you" he cried as he plunged into the placid lake followed by his savages

Clara sat in the motionless canoe, and her dark eyes were stern and dire, as the four heads with fierce visages drew nearer and nearer The silvered waters parted from the brawny throats and the sheen of the moon beams glittered upon the scalping knives borne between the white teeth of the savages Five more of those lusty sweeps of dusky arms would have carried them to the canoe when Clara cried—

Now father up Harold and as her lips spoke the words both sprang from ambush and feigned death, and the flash of their pistols was the last of earth seen by the Hurons, ere they sank forever

Abner Madge turned to regain the shore ere the pistols should try his life again, but he heard Harold cry 'You shall not escape and the heavy plash in the lake told him that a deadly and formidable foe was behind him whose skill as a swimmer was the talk of the northern frontiers The renegade was no coward, and had no lack of faith in his own prowess He wheeled to meet his enemy and drew his hunting knife from his belt As he drew it the long hair of the scalps at his girdle seemed to clap his arm with slimy folds and to bind his arm to his side For he could raise it his foe had darted upon him and buried his dagger in his throat He yelled with rage and pain—broke the American more than hold from his collar, and sank The next instant Harold whirled a complete somersault in the water and thus escaped the upward thrust of the renegade's hunting knife He sank and the fierce Abner to rise from below

A strange light red and unstable began to flare over the scene He glanced to the shore The hut was in flames A terrible vision of a bound and dead wretch flashed upon his mind when with a howl of agony he acknowledged a fresh wound from his implacable foe Harold had slashed him across the body below his belt He plunged beneath the wave and missed the blow that Harold struck at his neck as he rose for breath The wary American again sank and when the last failing renegade came up his enemy was beneath him.

He then whirled a somersault but did not escape the blade, for Harold had driven his dagger to the hilt in Abner's thigh The renegade blind with the loss of blood swam feebly around in irregular circles and as Harold again rose the mortal bullet of Henry Upson ended the strife The glare of the burning hut shone on the glazing eyes of the renegade as he gasped and sank to rise no more Harold hastened on to the canoe and the evening of the next day saw father, lover and maiden within the lines of the American army.

The hut blazed on, and when the sun shone again the blackened bones of Hester Madge were all that remained of the Renegade's Mother
